Online Desk : BNP Acting Chairman Tarique Rahman was spotted taking a public bus in London on Friday evening (local time), exemplifying a modest and unpretentious lifestyle. Tarique was seen at a bus stop in London on Friday evening (local time). He was standing like an ordinary passenger at the bust stop. His ordinary mode of travel stood in sharp contrast to the high-security movement commonly associated with top political figures in South Asia. The BNP media cell shared some still photos of the incident on social media tonight (Saturday).

While living in the UK, Tarique Rahman, the future statesman of Bangladesh, used to travel on local buses like ordinary people without availing any VIP facilities. It reflects his true humility, simple lifestyle and spiritual connection with the people, according to a brief message of the media cell.
